- 25X1 1. It is reported that on 11 March 1947 the Russian censor summoned the editor-in-chief and the political editor of the Morgen and informed them that pre-publication censorship is now completely abolished. He asked them not to present any more articles for him to read and to discontinue the practice of telephoning to discuss make-up and headlines.
2. The censor imparted this information confidentially and appeared to assume that the editors would be pleased; however, the editors were rather reserved and are awaiting the results of the new policy.
